

JOB DESCRIPTION

Discipline: Political Science (section 04 of the National Council of Universities, CNU)

Candidates must have a strong research record on external action of authoritarian States, specifically either China or Russia. In addition to demonstrating an excellent general knowledge of one of these countries, they must show expertise in the field of Chinese or Russian foreign policy on both the regional and global levels, focusing on subject matters such as foreign policy-making, interactions between political economy and foreign policy, China's or Russia's role in global governance, security policies, etc. They should also be interested in exploring research avenues comparing foreign policy decision-making processes within authoritarian States with those of democratic regimes, and addressing the question whether the former follow a path and comply with a logic that is different from the latter.

DUTIES

Research

Building upon his/her previous experience, the successful candidate will be expected to conduct innovative research leading to top-ranking publications and to the strengthening of his/her scientific networks, both national and international. He/she will also be expected to participate in the various research programs led by the CERI, and to cooperate with the Centre's other specialists in International Relations and in the same geographic area of studies. More specifically, he/she will join in the activities of CERI's Research Axis 1, "Actors and Scales of Regulation in the Global Space" and in those of one of the other axes ("Identities and Politics", "The State and its Transformations", "Political Participation and Mobilizations", or "Violence and Danger Management").

Given the profile of this position, it is anticipated that the successful candidate will contribute to the public debate on the external action of authoritarian States, while at the same time maintaining the highest academic standards.

Teaching

Annual teaching duties will consist of two courses (equivalent to 48 hours of lecture-based classes, LBC) and additional pedagogical obligations equivalent to 40 hours LBC. One of the courses will be taught on the Paris campus, either at the Bachelor's or the Master's (e.g. at the Paris School of International Affairs) level; the other course, at the Bachelor's level, would be part either of the Dijon campus curriculum (specializing in the post-Soviet space), or the Le Havre campus curriculum (focusing on Asia).

Candidates will have to demonstrate their ability to teach general courses in International Relations, and their willingness to contribute to the supervision of doctoral theses.

Sciences Po is an equal opportunity employer and invites women to candidate.

STATUS AND SPECIAL CONDITIONS

This position is offered for a period of six years maximum, at the end of which the chairholder might be granted tenure as Full Professor.

Position available at Sciences Po
Junior Chair in Political Science /
External Action of Authoritarian States (China or Russia)

As one of the main objectives of the Junior Chair programme is to foster research carried on by entry-level academic jobholders, a separate budget will be allocated to cover the following expenses:

- Three years of funding for a PhD student working on a dissertation pertaining to the topics covered by the chairholder.
- A part-time contract for a research assistant in charge of data management and data processing.
- Travel for fieldwork or for international participants in conferences organised at CERI.
